ERRATUM

The numerical system of the section titles in the article “Towards a Transparent Transcription” by Xing Wen 邢文 (Trinity University) in Asiatische Studien LIX•1•2005 was solely finalized by the copyeditor. It is not what the author intended to use, and we apologize for the mistake. In the following erratum, the underlined bold numbers before the dashes are the correct ones, and the plain numbers after the dashes are the published ones. The numbering begins where the error occurred.

2.2.2 – 2.2.2 Archaic graphs with variants that share the clerical or standard script forms for the same word

2.2.2 – 2.2.3 Archaic graphs with variants that share the clerical or standard script forms for the same word

(Note: Section 2.2.3 is actually a duplicated misprint of Section 2.2.2.)

2.2.3 – 2.2.4 Archaic graphs and their components with direct clerical script transcriptions that equate to different clerical or standard script characters

3 – 3 Reconsidering Direct Transcription

3.1 – 3.1 Archaic graphs with components that cannot be directly transcribed

3.1.1 – 3.1.1 Graphs or components of pictographic forms

3.1.2 – 3.1.2 Graphs or components that are not linearized

a) – a) Linearizing the filled-in part into one straight stroke

b) – b) Outlining the filled-in components

c) – c) Outlining the filled-in components with similar rather than exact profile strokes

d) – d) Indicating filled-in components with short strokes

e) – e) Indicating filled-in components with both short strokes and profile strokes

f) – f) Indicating filled-in components with T-shaped strokes

3.1.3 – 3.1.3 Graphs with curvilinear strokes

3.2 – 4 Archaic graphs with direct transcriptions that are identical to graphs standing for different words

3.2.1 – 4.1 Identical forms

3.2.2 – 4.2 Near-identical forms

3.2.3 – 4.3 Stylistic confusions

3.3 – 5 Classifier variations of archaic graphs3.3.1 – 5.1 Variant classifiersa) – 5.1.1 Identical components transcribed into different classifiersb) – 5.1.2 Identical classifiers conventionally transcribed with different forms3.3.2 – 5.2 Classifiers with different placements3.3.3 – 5.3 Variant classifiers with different placements3.4 – 6 Graphs with cursive stylized strokes4 – 7 Towards A Transparent Transcription
