HELP!!!

For a long time I received so many articles that I regularly had to let some people know that, unfortunately, their article could not be published due to lack of space. Lately this has changed – I don't know why. But what I do know is that there are plenty of interesting stories out there, just waiting to be told. So many Swiss have a special job, live somewhere unusual, have a wonderful hobby or simply do something outrageous that all other Swiss would love to know about. And you have probably no idea how many artists are among us!

Then there is always the possibility to inform readers about activities in your Swiss Club. Here, you simply have to bear in mind that the deadlines are relatively long.

So, I am definitely counting on you to again be inundated with proposals for articles – and obviously everything accompanied by pictures!

And who would have guessed that making jams and jellies is a hobby of mine! It started with all the trees we have in the garden. First it was apricots and plums, kumquat jam and jelly and orange marmalade, and then I got creative with fig-lemon jam.

Aurelio Bognesi: A Swiss Amongst the New Hampshire Masters

Swiss woodworker Aurelio Bognesi, born, raised, and educated in Lugano, came to the United States carrying the luggage which has helped to make him the renowned artist he is today: Swiss craftsmanship and work ethics, together with the imagination and creativity characteristic of the people of Ticino.

Coffee-Table: Bognesi's work combines high functionality with delightful uniqueness and beauty that inspires.

A graduate of the "Centro Scolastico per le Industrie Artistiche," a design school in Lugano, Bognesi worked as a designer in Paris, the Caribbean, and New York before establishing his studio in Hardwick, Massachusetts, where he lives with his wife Wendy. Bognesi has received a warm welcome from his American contemporaries, who have recognized that Bognesi's work combines high functionality with delightful uniqueness and beauty that inspires. In the words of David Tatlock, "Aurelio, or 'Bolo,' is a bolt out of the blue...What you get in a Bolo piece is stunning and functional. Chalk it up as a plus that his breadth of view and training is far beyond these shores, even as he has nestled into the quietly generative calm of Hardwick, Massachusetts, free to work out his sumptuous ideas." Not surprisingly, Bognesi received "an invitation to join the New Hampshire Furniture Masters Association, whose annual fall auction showcases some of the best current work anywhere" (Scott Gibson—"Furniture—102 Contemporary Designs.") The Wall Street Journal describes the Furniture Masters (www.furnituremasters.org) as "Crafting Tomorrow's Antiques, Today."

Small chest with two drawers.

Bognesi's work is part of some important private collections, and has been shown in several galleries and at the Currier Museum of Fine Art, the Portsmouth Museum of Fine Art, and Paradise City Art Festivals. It has also been featured in several books and magazines in the States and abroad.

When working with clients, Bognesi designs dream furniture through scale models until his customer is perfectly satisfied, and will ship his furniture anywhere in the world. His pieces are true reflections of his craft and method: utterly refined, down to the smallest detail, while at the same time appearing peacefully and happily effortless.

Bognesi's collection can be viewed at his website, www.aurelio-bognesi.com, and he can be contacted at ambodesign@gmail.com

The Swiss community in Michigan was very active in 2010 hosting traditional annual events, such as the popular Fondue dinner, 1st of August picnic and Christmas Party with Swiss Santa of the Detroit Swiss Society, as well as by taking advantage of special occasions to celebrate our Swiss heritage and showcasing Switzerland. Members of the Detroit Swiss Society came together at the Detroit Science Museum early in the year to view the Swiss movie

"The Alps." Some preferred the warmer weather and attended a very special "Open House" at the Michigan International Speedway. Two Swiss teams from Winterthur competed and won the $ 2.5 million first prize in their category of the Progressive Insurance $ 10 million Automotive X-Prize Competition, promoting the next generation of highly fuel/energy efficient vehicles. We were honored to have the winning Swiss team joining us for two cookouts during their long competition in Michigan. We were also delighted to have had the opportunity to host Marc Müller from the French speaking part of Switzerland during his world tour in a solar and wind powered vehicle. We were able to facilitate local meetings for him with industry and university leaders in the field of green technology. Another memorable occasion was a wonderful concert by the visiting Knaubenmusik from St. Gallen. Finally, a very special highlight was the Detroit Swiss Society's "Taste of Switzerland" event at the historical Henry Ford Estate in Dearborn in October, with about 90 in attendance. Special guests included the Honorary Consul General of Austria in Detroit and our famous guest speaker and long standing member, Master Chef Leopold Schaeli, who introduced our fea-

California The Swiss Benevolent Society of San Francisco celebrates its 125th anniversary

In 1850, two years after gold was found at Sutter's Mill, the Swiss Consulate was established in San Francisco. Around that time, a Swiss Mutual and Benevolent Society of San Francisco was also founded but we know

Consul General Julius Anderegg listens to a presentation

little of it. We consider therefore the founding of the Swiss Relief Society in 1886 by Swiss Consul Antoine Borel and other Compatriots as our founding date. Swiss immigration was very different then, as people emigrated to find work and to survive. Most immigrants spoke little or no English and were isolated from the general economy; they depended largely on their fellow Swiss for help and social life. In 1901, The Swiss Relief Society was formally incorporated and everything was well until April 18, 1906 when the earthquake and subsequent fire destroyed

San Francisco. Even the office of the Swiss Relief Society burned and all archives were totally destroyed. Vice-Consul Freuler went through the smoldering debris of the office and managed to retrieve the fireproof safe. It contained $11,537.52, equivalent to $283,800 today. Acting Society President Emil Pohli immediately started disbursement of cash to the Swiss earthquake victims at special weekly meetings. By the end of the year, they had disbursed the entire sum. In 1916, the widow of Consul Borel donated $20,000 to the Society in memoriam of her husband. To put this into perspective: a homeless person could get one week's stay in a room at the Helvetia Hotel for $2.50! On a humorous note, there was a debate whether to organize the customary Swiss Independence Day picnic in 1919 on June 29, as Prohibition started on July 1st of that year! In the end, tradition prevailed and the picnic was held on August 3d, without beer and wine.

The Society survived World War One, the Great Depression and World War II, where six members lost their lives fighting on the side of the Allies. After World War II, the Society reached its highest membership ever, with 628 paying members. As the US instituted its social programs, the need for financial assistance from the Society diminished. However, we realized the need to provide financial assistance for the education of our younger members. In 1979, August K. Strotz put the scholarship pro-

During the last 25 years, generous donations from Mrs. and Mr. Amstutz in 1986, Mrs. Canonica and Mr. Isler in 2000, and by Mrs. Iselin in 2006 enabled us to broaden our scholarship program. At the 2011 Annual Meeting Mrs. Iselin pledged another $50,000 to her scholarship fund. Thank you very much. The Amstutz scholarship was the first to be awarded on merit only. Since its inception, our program has supported students with close to $750,000. This generosity has been made possible by contributions from our members and the aforementioned donors, our investment income, financial support by Swiss clubs in the gram in motion, and it was an immediate success. Financial assistance to the less fortunate was not stopped, but it was no longer the main focus. In 1986, the Swiss Relief Society celebrated the 100th anniversary with a ball, attended by Mayor Diane Feinstein and Swiss Ambassador Klaus Jacobi. The society also changed its name to "The Swiss Benevolent Society of San Francisco." Two years earlier, the first Seniors Party and Spring Dance was organized by Mrs. Iselin; this popular party, free of charge for seniors over 70 years, has been held ever since and is usually attended by over 100 people.

Bay Area and the Swiss Federal Government.

This year, as we celebrate our 125th anniversary, we are a vibrant society and proof that we have changed with the times. We will celebrate this milestone with a formal Gala Dinner and Ball on September 10 at the Westin St. Francis in San Francisco. Please visit our web site www.sbsf.com for more information.

New York Swiss Ball 2011

in Honor of Albert Gallatin

York dedicated its annual Ball to this historical figure, who arguably has been overlooked by history.

Held at the spectacular Pierre Hotel on Fifth Avenue across from Central Park, the Swiss Ball is the most important formal social event of the Swiss community. It was a great success, attracting more than 300 people. "This is a record attendance of a level not seen in over 25 years," underlined Beat Reinhart, the Swiss Society President. To mark Gallatin's historic times, guests were welcomed to an ambience enlivened by students of the Albert Gallatin School for Individualized Studies of New York University, who were dressed in period costumes. Gallatin's image on his US postage stamp fronted the Silent Auction booklet, and his immeasurable lifetime of commitment to public service in the founding of the United States was shown on the dinner card with important dates of his life. The evening started with a cocktail reception. Soon there was a dense crowd of people milling around - greeting, hugging and toasting galore. And yes, there was that scent of warm cheese in the air, too. Can't have a gathering of Swiss expats without "Raclette" - no matter that there's dinner to follow later! We just

The doors to the grand ballroom then opened for the main part of the evening. The orchestra played a wide array of music under the magnificent chandeliers. be found in education, with the founding of New York University. "To this day NYU is influenced by the spirit of Gallatin. The essence of Gallatin is Swiss. And the essence of NYU is Gallatin." The biggest jewel of NYU, he added, was the Gallatin School for Individualized Studies, where students compile their own curriculum. The 2011 Swiss Society Fellowship Prize of $ 10,000 is awarded to NYU's Gallatin School.

Washington

Living in Harmony with Nature on the Olympic Peninsula

Elisabeth was born in Gossau, canton St. Gallen as one of nine children. She did a four year apprenticeship as Mechanical Designer in Switzerland and worked in her profession until age 51. Falling in love brought her to the US in 1981, and kept her here.

For reasons unknown to either of them, Steve and Elisabeth found themselves living on the Olympic Peninsula in Washington State. Maybe it was because it is just the most beautiful spot in the United States. They spend their time involved in the natural environment, gardening, fishing, and utilizing the bounty that their environment provides as the seasons turn.

They are bee keepers because the bees provide both a vital contribution to the pollination of the environment and also some of arguably the best honey on the planet. Here Elisabeth spins the honey out of the frames and then it's just poured into jars.

They grow multiple varieties of squash.

Beets, turnips, parsnips, carrots, and potatoes are grown and then stored in the cold cellar for winter use. In the fall, many species of mushroom grow. One of the favorites is the Chanterelle. Steve knows when and where to catch whatever. Here it's Dungeness crab. They are cooked, cleaned, and packaged for frittatas or soups.

This is the back half of their property and several of their gardens. In their greenhouse, they start plants, and then transplant them into their gardens.

Their gardens and orchard are organic. Here's their Strawberry bed in bloom, some of their Bing Cherries, Peaches, and Figs.

They produce, harvest, and process most of their own vegetables.

They grow their own cabbage and process it into sauerkraut.

Some days it's so calm that the water is like glass. This is a great time to be fishing.

Leisure time: Steve plays his mandolin, Elisabeth studies a Backgammon move, and later teaches the game of "Jass". They have their own herd of deer, and occasionally the Raccoon population explodes and then they have to relocate the extras.
