REGIONAL NEWS

SOUTHERN AFRICA

Editorial

Dear readers,

The Roger Federer Foundation is not in the news very often and almost “flying under the radar”, despite the fact that their work and dedication has a big impact on many children and their education in Africa. 277'000 children are currently benefitting from their programs, all of them in Southern Africa, and it is planned to reach one million children by 2018. This is impressive!

Happy reading,
Gisela Piercey

Roger Federer Foundation taking on lead role in Zambia

For the first time in the foundation's history the Roger Federer Foundation has not only developed an initiative but is also the lead implementer. Was is the rationale of the new programme called "i-act"?

The quality of teaching is a fundamental problem in Africa. The vast majority of teachers is only trained on content and lacks skills on efficient didactical approaches and pedagogical methods. Even worse, in rural schools, teachers often have no formal training at all. Large scale enhancement of pedagogical skills can make a real difference, irrespective of the speed of improvement in other areas.

Motivational learning method

Mobile technology and self-guided learning is an opportunity particularly for the many teachers without access to existing training schemes. Cost-effectiveness due to upscale potential despite higher initial costs than conventional trainings. A video based course can stimulate better: Play, watch and discuss instead of (not) reading. Individual and peer-based learning is more sustainable then getting just one training. The course needs to be attractive, motivational and offer incentives. Based on existing training materials on interactive teaching skills, the foundation has developed a self-guided course, supported by handheld devices. Much cheaper than traditional trainings, this will allow remotely monitored peer-group learning. Training of unskilled teachers in Zambia

The first target group are unqualified and unskilled teachers from community schools in Zambia who will receive tablets to be shared and personal work-books at a one-day introductory training on the use of the course, followed by few face-to-face 'pit stop' events. Additionally, teachers in government schools can download the course or order a USB stick for free.

As local as possible' is a key principle for all RFF-funded interventions. While, as an exception, RFF cannot hand over the complete lead to a local partner organization in this case,

Project plans to train 5500 unqualified teachers in Zambia with Saide they have found an experienced institution in South Africa who did the design of the course and Zambian stakeholders will cover other parts of the course production. The roll-out is done by different Zambian NGOs such as ROCS, ZOCS and DAPP, facilitated by an implementing committee in Zambia.

In 2017 there will be a roll-out to 1500 teachers and 500 community schools in rural areas of Zambia. In 2018 it is planned to reach out to another 5500 teachers and 1500 community schools. For the development of the course and the roll-out in the first two years the Board has approved a total budget of 1.8 Mio CHF.

Goal: To reach one million children

The Roger Federer Foundation supports educational projects located in the region of southern Africa and Switzerland. The programmes on the African continent focus on the improvement of the quality of early learning and basic education and in Switzerland on the promotion of extra-curricular activities for children affected by poverty. All activities are realised and implemented by local non-governmental authorities in close collaboration with the local communities. In order to evaluate our impact we measure the changes in the levels of supported children's performance, rate repetitions, absences or enrolment rates.

In celebrating its tenth anniversary, the Roger Federer Foundation has set itself an ambitious goal. By 2018, they aim to support one million children in receiving access to education of a convincing quality. The barometer below reflects the progress towards this goal. Each child receiving education at an institution supported by the Foundation will only be counted once in the process.

Encounters film festival in June

The encounters film festival takes place from 1 – 17 June and we are pleased to announce that the Mats Staub project "21 Memories of Growing Up" is incorporated into the festival programme this year.

Additionally Mats and South African collaborator Maia Marie will be discussing the project in the context of a panel discussion organised by Encounters.

Encounters this year also happens in the wake of the South Africa focus at 2017 edition of the Vision du Reel documentary film festival in Nyon, Switzerland, and Swiss Films provides support for a Swiss focus in the Encounters film and master class programme, including films from Laurence Bonvin previously a Pro Helvetia artist in residence in South Africa.

Special Project:

21 – Memories of Growing Up (Exhibition)

When did you turn 21? What happened that year? And how did you become adult? Swiss artist Mats Staub asked these questions of a large group of people, of all ages, and recorded their stories and had them listen to their answers three months later, while filming their facial expressions. This became the video installation 21 – Memories of Growing Up. The exhibition is growing from city to city and will present portraits from Switzerland, Germany, Serbia, England, Holland and South Africa.

01 – 11 June, 9am – 6pm,
Homecoming Centre, District 6

Museum, 15a Buitenkant St, Zonnebloem, Cape Town.
