Le cahier 26 de Colloquium Helveticum offre quatre contributions (issues en partie du Colloque 1996 de l'Association suisse de littérature générale et comparée). Ces contributions démontrent la signification d'une notion qui depuis plus de trente ans enrichit la critique littéraire.

De Hafiz à Georg Trakl, de Virgile à Hölderlin et Rimbaud, de Hamann à Thomas Mann, ces contributions visent à apporter, à partir de questions actuelles, quelques nouvelles réponses. Elles montrent que la notion d'intertextualité est difficile à cerner et confirment la tendance actuelle qui délaisse une conceptualisation volontiers floue au profit de mises en perspective s'appuyant sur des éléments concrets, tels le lexique, la syntaxe, les métaphores, l'allusion, le paratexte, la citation en langue étrangère.

Ainsi placée dans un contexte actuel, l'intertextualité reste une notion heuristique précieuse, capable d'entretenir un rapport vital avec la littérature comparée et avec la littérature tout court.

Heft 26 des Colloquium Helveticum bringt vier Beiträge (von denen einige auf die Jahrestagung 1996 der Schweizerischen Gesellschaft für allgemeine und vergleichende Literaturwissenschaft zurückgehen). Diese Beiträge stellen die Bedeutung eines Begriffs unter Beweis, der seit über dreissig Jahren die Literaturkritik bereichert.

Die Beiträge erstrecken sich von Hafiz bis zu Georg Trakl, von Vergil bis zu Hölderlin und Rimbaud, von Hamann bis zu Thomas Mann. Aus unterschiedlichen Blickwinkeln stossen sie zu neuen Antworten vor. Sie zeigen auf, wie schwierig es ist, Intertextualität begrifflich zu fassen; sie bestätigen die heutige Tendenz, allzu weit gefasste Konzeptualisierungen aufzugeben und Perspektivierungen anzustreben, die auf konkret fassbaren Elementen fussen, seien sie nun lexikalischer, syntaktischer, metaphorischer Natur, oder beziehen sie sich auf Anspielung, Paratext, fremdsprachige Zitate.

Solchermassen in einen aktuellen Kontext eingebettet, bleibt Intertextualität heuristisch wertvoll und unterhält eine lebendige Beziehung zur vergleichenden Literaturwissenschaft und zur Literatur überhaupt.

Il numero 26 della rivista Colloquium Helveticum pubblica quattro articoli (alcuni dei quali riprendono comunicazioni presentate a un convegno organizzato nel 1996 dall'Associazione svizzera di letteratura generale e comparata) che sottolineano la vitalità del concetto di intertestualità, da più di trent'anni oggetto di vivaci dibattiti nel mondo della critica letteraria.

Gli argomenti trattati riguardano autori diversi, da Hafiz a Georg Trakl, da Virgilio a Hölderlin e Rimbaud, da Hamann fino a Thomas Mann, e propongono nuove risposte a interrogativi posti secondo la visuale odierna. Proprio perché un concetto mutevole è visto in una nuova ottica, gli studi presentati dalla rivista confermano la tendenza attuale a rinunciare a una concettualizzazione troppo vaga, dando la preferenza a prospettive fondate su elementi concreti, che possono essere di natura lessicale, sintattica o metaforica, oppure utilizzando allusioni, paratesti, citazioni in lingua straniera.

Collocata in un contesto attuale, l'intertestualità rimane una nozione euristicamente valida, in vivace rapporto con la comparatistica e la letteratura in generale.

The 26th volume of Colloquium Helveticum contains four essays (presented partly at the Symposium 1996 of the Swiss Association of General and Comparative Literature). These contributions document the signification of a notion that for more than thirty years has enriched the literary criticism.

From Hafiz to Georg Trakl, from Virgil to Hölderlin and Rimbaud, from Hamann to Thomas Mann, these contributions try to give some new answers to topical issues. They suggest a new clarification of this complex notion. They confirm the contemporary tendency to give up a conceptualisation that is often too vague, for perspectives based on concrete elements, connected e.g. with vocabulary, syntax, metaphor, allusion, paratext, quotations in a foreign language.

Thus placed in an actual context, intertextuality is still a precious heuristic notion, capable of maintaining lively connection with comparative literature and literature in general.
