SUCCESS UNLIMITED

WHEN we emigrate from home to a foreign country like New Zealand, America or where ever we may go, we all have in our hearts a desire to succeed in whatever sphere of activity we have the inclination to pursue.

If by any chance, after a few years we are not satisfied with the measure of success we expected, have we ever sat down and thought about the cause for this? Have we ever thought that we have to give first before we can expect to receive? A habit of cheerful service, a willingness to always do a little more than is expected from us, be ready to help wherever we see the need — these are the seeds which eventually and invariably help us to reap the harvest we expect.

Education has very little to do with one's success in life; it must help if applied conscientiously, but it can in fact be a hindrance if one is out to get his education too easily as it tends to be only superficialness; however, it is important to concentrate on doing things well, no matter how unimportant they might look.

Feltham, in his quotation on success, writes: "The greatest results in life are usually attained by simple means and the exercise of ordinary qualities." These may for the most part be summed up in these words: Common sense and perseverance.
