WELCOME MAT TO SWITZERLAND

That the joining up of Switzerland with the Common Market is not a simple and straightforward matter is beautifully illustrated in this cartoon. There is a very rough patch to cross for the Swiss before the way is clear for them to become part of Europe. Many feel the risk is too great and would rather see Switzerland stay by itself instead of trying to cross the gap.

KUONI IN GERMAN HANDS

Kuoni, Switzerland's largest travel organisation has become German. The German chain of supermarkets KAUFHOF has just bought 50.1% of the shares and thus taken virtually control of management of the Swiss travel wholesaler. Most of the shares purchased by Kaufhof came from Swissair who was until then one of the major shareholders in Kuoni.

SUPER MAMY

Rösli STREIF, 91 years old, ex world ski champion, still wants to keep on driving her car. Rösli lives in Glarus and has had a car and a driving licence since 1924. She loves to drive and over the past 68 years she only had two fines: one for illegal parking and the other for omitting to switch on her headlights in a tunnel.

Rösli is quite well known in Switzerland because her hyperactive life keeps her repeatedly in the public limelight. Not many great-grandmothers could match her exploits: water-skiing at 73, hang-gliding at 87, skiing daily every winter until she broke her hip at the age of 88. At 91 her eyesight, hearing, memory and reflexes are still 100 percent.

She became world champion in slalom skiing in 1932 at Cortina d'Ampezzo in Northern Italy. She remembers clearly that at that time it took her some 15 hours by steam train to get from Zurich to Cortina.
