SWISS INSTITUTE.

The second Sunday Afternoon Concert during the present winter was given by the Swiss Institute Orchestra and friends last Sunday at Steinway Hall.

The lovely day—after one of the worst fogs experienced in recent years during the week previous—must have made a good many patrons choose to spend the few hours of sunshine in the parks or countryside near home, and but for this, there can be no doubt that a "full house" would have surprised nobody, and naturally would have pleased the organisers greatly.

However, the attendance was rather larger than on the previous occasion, in fact, about 300 friends in all followed with lively attention the various items of the programme.

The orchestra and its able conductor, Mr. E. P. Dick, made themselves responsible for altogether six pieces, and earned well-deserved and prolonged applause.

To mention the other artists, Miss Madeleine Theiler needs no introduction, and like on previous occasions, her two piano solos again delighted everybody.

In Miss Helen Muller, playing the violin, we have a promising débutante, and we hope that she may be heard again on future occasions.

Last, but not least, a trusted English friend, Mr. Norman Blake, once again by his splendid baritone voice greatly contributed to the general success of the afternoon.

Truly, these concerts fully maintain their popularity, and thereby the best possible encouragement is given to the players and friends who voluntarily give their time and talent to a deserving cause, social and patriotic alike.

THE CITY SWISS CLUB BANQUET.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS.—By A DEBUTANTE.

Le Banquet et Bal—these had been the subjects of our conversation for a long time, and with great expectancy and slight nervousness the great day was at length greeted.

It was an important event to go to a large Banquet for the first time, and rather awe-inspiring to be in the company of famous men, such as a diplomat with the title of "Excellency," a lawyer of international fame, and other leading men in banking and commercial life.

To see some three hundred people sitting down to dinner, all looking their very best and all most friendly, was a fine sight. The official Toast Master, in his red coat with mallet in hand, must have impressed many. His voice was stentorian, though his knowledge and pronunciation of French not exactly perfect, and some of the names called out by him were hardly recognisable. The presence of a noble Lord brought the Toast Master, no doubt, a welcome opportunity for great effect. It was fine to hear the toast to the King sung so heartily, and the toast to "La Patrie," which marked the highest point of the assembly's enthusiasm.

The dancing was splendid; I enjoyed it more than anything. I feel convinced that all have carried away the happiest memories, and I, for one, am already looking forward to "next time."

the same time, incidentally, they numbered themselves amongst the last eight in the A.F.A. Minor Cup competition, by beating Great Northern Rly. Reserves, on their ground at Gordon Hill, in the fourth round.

The railwaymen were no mean opponents, and they intended just simply to win. However, after the shakiness of the first few minutes had passed, it was evident that there was not much to choose between the teams. The G.N.R. defence, perhaps, was not so sound as the corresponding Swiss department, and the latter's forwards should have scored at least twice in the first half, which was not particularly thrilling, the players being too serious to be daring or spectacular.

The second half showed football of a nature more to be expected in a Cup Tie. With the score sheet still blank and the light fading, both teams pressed for a decision. In consequence, play became first hard and then rough. The railwaymen made no secret of the fact that they had expected an easy victory, and, possibly, it was the gradual fading of these hopes which caused a regrettable commencement of dirty tactics. Human nature being what it is, the Swiss cannot be held exempt from a readiness to reply with the same methods, and only the prompt action of the referee saved the game from its inevitable end, this official using his whistle without hesitation on the slightest suspicion of fouling.

The only goal of the match came from a free-kick, and perhaps it was poetic justice, too, for Quifé gained possession of the ball and worked into a very favourable position, from which a goal was certain, provided his shot was true. However, just outside the penalty area he was brought down heavily by the opposing back in the act of going through. Holton, skipper, entrusted Glaser with the ensuing free-kick, and this player without hesitation placed the ball clean into the net with a magnificent drive. Glaser's kick with the left is getting famous.

All efforts of the G.N.R. to equalise met with no success.

This match ends the Swiss programme for 1924, and their record now stands: Games played 13, won 11, drawn 2. Goal average: For 33, Against 8.

The fifth round of the Cup will be played on January 10th.
