SCHWEIZERBUND. SWISS CLUB.

Though another important function had taken place in the Colony only two days previously, the Annual Dinner of the Schweizerbund, which was held on Thursday, March 15th, attracted a "full house." (The large hall at 74, Charlotte Street, W.1 was specially decorated for the occasion, and the tasteful raised bank of artificial flowers created a unique background to the chair, which was occupied by M. de Bourg, First Secretary of Legation. The two traditional toasts having been suitably submitted and honoured with the usual enthusiasm, M. de Bourg rose again to express on behalf of the Swiss Minister intense regrets at being prevented from presiding over the banquet. M. Paravicini had only just returned from a prolonged tour and found an accumulation of important matters which required his personal and immediate attention. However greatly the Minister's absence was felt by the audience, he (M. de Bourg) was not very grieved as this gave him once more the opportunity and privilege of spending a delightful evening in the homely atmosphere of the Swiss Club. He had heard it stated that the heart of the Swiss Colony was to be found at 74, Charlotte Street, W.1, and he was sure no other expression could equally describe the spirit which prevailed at this address.

Mr. Jules Tresch, the President, in proposing the future prosperity of his Club, first extended a hearty welcome to M. de Bourg, whose presence, as an official representative of Switzerland, was so essential to the success of the gathering. An Englishman, Sir H. Wotton, once described an ambassador as "an honest man sent to lie abroad for the commonwealth." He was satisfied that Swiss politics and aspirations enabled our representatives to dispense with the latter attribute. Mr. Tresch was flattered to be allowed to address such a distinguished company and he was sure that the good dinner would sharpen their wit and at the same time soften their hearts. It was his duty to give a short account of the Club's activity during the last twelve months; he would quickly dispose of that task. In order to effect some unavoidable repairs the Committee had to spend a considerable amount of money which prevented them from showing a profit; however, they were not disheartened, as their chief aim consisted of offering the members recreation by way of music, dancing, etc., and refreshments at reasonable prices. He was glad to say that the members were taking full advantage of these facilities and though the drinks were cheap had given wonderful proofs of temperance; they evidently all recognised that the first drink satisfied thirst, the second was for nourishment, the third for pleasure and the fourth for madness. In proposing the "Schweizerbund," Mr. Tresch concluded in hoping that the club would continue to remain under the orders of General Peace, General Plenty and General Prosperity.

Mr. L. Pache, the Vice-President, was in charge of the toast to the official guests of the Club. He was pleased to be once more able to extend a most cordial welcome to M. de Bourg, who was accompanied by Mr. P. Hilfinger, the Chancellor of our Legation. It struck him that these two gentlemen, who held such important offices, could enjoy themselves in their leisure time as if they had not a single care in the world. In greeting the Rev. and Mrs. J. C. T. Hahn, Mr. Pache feared that our popular shepherd did not count many of his flock among the company. In welcoming Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Boehringer, from the Swiss Observer, the speaker was happy in the knowledge that if their order perhaps could no more fight with his fists he was still able to put up a determined fight with his pen. It afforded him a special pleasure to single out from among their guests Mr. Brunner, the president of the Swiss Club in Birmingham, whom they had not seen for several years. The London Sociétés were represented as follows: Société de Secours Mutuels, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Martin; City Swiss Club, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Jobin; Unione Ticinese, Mr. W. Notari and Mr. Carlo Berti; Swiss Mercantile Society, Mr. Boos and Mr. Schütz; Union Helvetia, Mr. and Mrs. Diethelm; Swiss Choral Society, Mr. and Mrs. E. Weber; Swiss Gymnastic Society, Mr. Schneeberger; and Swiss Rifle Association, Mr. P. Devincenzi.

Mr. P. F. Boehringer, in returning thanks on behalf of the guests, said he was always anxious to secure the latest news. Up till now he had understood that the centre of gravity of the Colony was somewhere in Queen Anne Street; he now heard it officially stated that that quarter disclaimed any such distinction and that the heart of the Colony was to be looked for at 74, Charlotte Street, W.1. It seemed to him that there were several stray hearts at that address considering that all the Committee members were bachelors. No doubt this was one of the reasons why the affairs of the Club were so well managed, as the mental balance of the President or Secretary was not disturbed by the volcanic changes in domestic felicity caused by the mysterious operations of spring cleaning so much in vogue at this time of the year. He could assure the President of the whole-hearted sympathy of all the guests in his failure to produce a satisfactory profit and loss account; if the Committee looked after its members half as well as it did that night after the great number of guests nothing different could be expected.

Mr. A. Martin also replied, dwelling on the long and intimate relations that had always existed between his Society (Secours Mutuels) and the "Schweizerbund."

Mr. E. Forster, the Secretary, introduced the toast to the ladies by saying that all through his life he had been fond of three things, chess, chemistry and the ladies. The first two he had given up as hopeless, but he could not separate himself from the ladies. Fate, however, had been very unkind to him, though he was thankful that there was no tax on bachelors in this country. He had been a very happy man and lived in great hopes from the 1st of January to the 29th of February last as he had been given to understand that being Leap Year there was the chance of his life; but nothing came his way. He had to console himself with the saying that the happiest hours of a lady's life are spent before her glass whilst a man's happiest hours are spent after several glasses.

Mr. Dürlewanger, one of the oldest members, took the company back to the early days of 1887, when seventy compatriots subscribed half-a-crown each to start the club; they had to pay their rent three weeks in advance. It was only by persevering and holding together that the venture ultimately proved a success. He was sure that if the younger members would co-operate in that spirit with the older ones they could look into the future with confidence.

Yielding to a general clamour, Mr. Delalay also spoke a few words. He, as a keen sportsman, very much regretted the absence of the Minister, as he would doubtless have emulated his previous performance by giving them a tip for the Grand National. Mr. Dürlewanger had struck the right note, and he would draw the Committee's attention to the fact that next year's banquet would be the 50th in their history. Remarks had been made that night about their bachelor Committee, but he sincerely hoped they did not fit in with a description he had heard not long ago, namely, that a modern bachelor was an owner of an Austin Seven who takes his young lady out for a ride and if she does not kiss him at the first opportunity sends her home walking by herself. Though bachelors appeared to be plentiful at present, things were not always like this in the Club. He knew of two old members who successfully and very creditably disposed of seven daughters each through the amenities of the Club.

The remainder of the evening was given over to dancing till the early hours of the morning. Mrs. Aebersol kept up the spirits of the company by intoning now and then a popular Yodel. No pains were spared by Messrs. Tresch and Forster, the President and Secretary, to attend personally to everybody's comfort.
