Despite Switzerland's adverse foreign trade balance, an influx of gold is again recorded by the latest Swiss National Bank's return for the week to January 14th.

During that period, gold stocks rose by Frs.6.8m. to Frs.6,253m. A like increase is shown by foreign exchange holdings which advanced to Frs. 267m.

The fiduciary issue dropped by Frs.117m. to Frs. 4,274m., a decline of Frs.176m. having already been recorded during the previous week, thus completely offsetting the sharp rise immediately before and after Christmas.

British exports to Switzerland in December reached the record total of £2,700,000, compared with £1,950,000 in November, it was announced. British imports from this country fell from £1,500,000 to £1,200,000, the lowest for the year.

Traffic

As a result of the decision of the Swiss Federal Railways in December, 1947, to undertake working tests with two rubber-tyre coaches in service conditions, orders for two prototypes were placed with two Swiss wagon-building works. One was to have a lightweight all-steel body, the other an all-aluminium body, as mentioned in The Railway Gazette of June 18th, 1948.

The body of an ordinary fast-train lightweight steel carriage of the Swiss Federal Railways weighs 22,880 lb., and the steel body of the rubber-tyre coach will weigh only 10,780 lb. As with the Micheline-type coaches forming the three rubber-tyre rapides now in service between Paris and Strasbourg, this saving in weight is imperative because the weight of the complete vehicle must not exceed 15 tonnes so as to avoid an excessive load on the rubber tyres, and with the same object each bogie has ten wheels.

Although the three French trains consist exclusively of rubber-tyre coaches, the two Swiss prototypes are to be included in fast trains composed of coaches with ordinary steel-tyre wheels.

These considerations, together with the fact that the coaches are the first with rubber-tyres to be built in Switzerland, prompted the decision of one of the builders, Schweizerische Wagons-und Aufzügefabrik, Zurich-Schlieren, to undertake the extensive tests and measurements of the steel body. These tests, relating to vertical and longitudinal stresses, were again carried out and demonstrated in January, when a special American electrical measuring instrument was placed in operation.

All the tests have been supervised by Monsieur Gaspard, a French engineer and rubber-tyred coach expert of the French National Railways, working in co-operation with Monsieur Robert Guignard of the traction and workshop section of the Swiss Federal Railways.

All the experts consulted agreed that the tests carried out have been entirely successful. Considerably higher stress values than obtaining in normal service conditions were reached without exposing the steel body to any harmful consequences.

By a recent decree the Federal Council has issued new provisions governing the military railway organisation of the country. A military railway director is to be appointed; by the old regulations this appointment was not made until the moment of mobilisation. He is to be assisted by three working zone directors in personal touch with the head of the construction and working department of the general management of the Federal Railways and with the three divisional managers of the Federal Railways.

The military railway director will have the task of ensuring the efficient and continuous working of all the railways in the interest of the armed forces and the civil population. If required by defence reasons, the director issues instructions for the limitations or discontinuance of the civilian traffic. He has unlimited power over the staff of all transport undertakings.

THE SWISS TEXTILE INDUSTRY AND THE SWISS INDUSTRIES FAIR.

The 34th Swiss Industries Fair in Basle, from the 15th-25th April, 1950, will once again provide an all-embracing picture of the care with which the Swiss textile industry builds up its production according to material and form. The number of exhibitors will be equal to that of the previous years and, in point of the equipment of the stands, these exhibitors will form one of the most impressive exhibitor groups.

The management of the Fair is again making great efforts to devote increased attention to a concentrated display calculated to reveal the large number of goods exhibited in most attractive surroundings. Fashion will be shown in the special group styled "Création", a display which has already been described by experts as the acme of the art of demonstrating goods, and the show at the forthcoming Fair will certainly leave nothing to be desired. Textile machinery will be displayed as usual in a united group in Hall IX.

Excellent means of access by land and air will facilitate a visit to the Fair for visitors from foreign countries. The representative of the Swiss Industries Fair, Swiss Legations, Consulates and Chambers of Commerce in foreign countries will be happy to give advice and assistance to those interested. The Swiss Industries Fair in Basle extends, even at this early period, a most hearty welcome to its visitors from abroad.
