On Wednesday December 5th, 1951, the aircraft of Swissair have covered since the 1st January, 1950, ten million kilometres. This is the first time in the history of our civil aviation that aircraft flying under Switzerland's flag will have covered so great a distance in one year. Taking into account the company's comparatively small fleet of aircraft and the small number of air crews, the results are very much in honour of the latter and the technical maintenance staff.

Twenty years ago in the year of Swissair's birth, its aircraft covered 724,476 kms. In 1938 just before the war the figure reached 1,483,794 kms. Since 1946, progress was much more rapid: 2,473,413 kms. in 1946, 4,106,208 in 1947, 6,224,920 in 1948, 8,611,084 in 1949, and 9,047,793 in 1950.

A Zurich taxi-driver appealed against a five-day sentence imposed because he drank wine on a trip in Austria and then had an accident when he returned to Switzerland.

The Supreme Court ruled that he broke Swiss law, not by drinking in Austria, but by bringing it back to Switzerland in his blood.
