Thursday (until Sept. 24th) Stresa and its beautiful islands in Northern Italy will attract happy holiday makers from the Bernese Oberland for one more memorable experience. On Wednesday the round trip Berne-Montreux-Valais-Loetschberg will be no less popular. There is no doubt that Zermatt and Gornergrat (Tuesday), which have been added to this tempting list for the first time this year, will prove a successful venture.

A twice-weekly Four Pass Alpine Tour (Ofenberg, Umbrail, Stelvio and Bernina) and Three Country Trip (Switzerland, Italy and Austria), as well as the excursion to the Weissfluhjoch (by rail, alpine motor coach, funicular and chair hoist) is organised by the Rhaetian Railways and the Swiss Alpine Postal Coach Service for visitors to the Engadine resorts such as Sils-Maria, St. Moritz, Pontresina, Zuz, etc.

Davos and Klosters are rounding off the grand programme with a Five Passes Alpine Tour (Fluela, Ofenberg, Umbrail, Stelvio and Bernina) and the Albula-Bernina-Julier Tour.

Prepaid vouchers and full particulars can be obtained from principal Travel Agents or the Swiss National Tourist Office. The respective amount, however, is in most cases chargeable against the basic allowance.

The Swiss holiday resort of Lausanne expects to be host to between 70,000 and 75,000 visitors between July 8th and 25th next year when the Federal Shooting Festival will be held near the town. The organisers of this, one of Switzerland's greatest patriotic and sporting events, after considering a number of sites for the 1954 festival, finally chose Ecublens, between Lausanne and Morges on the northern shore of Lake Geneva. The competitions will take place in a vast natural amphitheatre. Ecublens is easily accessible for visitors travelling by both rail and road.

This year, as in the past, Switzerland's national festival on August 1st will be commemorated by the issue of a series of five new postage stamps. They will be obtainable in all Swiss post offices between June 1st and August 31st, or from the Philatelic Service of the Swiss Postal Administration in Berne from June 1st to Sept. 15th.

The five-centime stamp is devoted to the 600th anniversary of the entry of Berne into the Swiss Confederation. Those of 10, 20, 30 and 40 centimes are an addition to the series, introduced last year, on Swiss lakes and rivers. The Schoellenen Bridge over the River Reuss, in the St. Gotthard massif, goes on the 10-centime stamp. The 20-centime stamp shows the Lake of Sihl in the Canton of Schwyz. On the 30-centime is a Valaisan bisse, an ancient (though still in general use) irrigation trough. The Lake of Geneva is pictured on the 40-centime stamps. Additions to the face value of the stamps are to go this year towards Swiss people living abroad and to help a scheme for assisting professionally handicapped citizens. These supplements amount to five centimes in the case of the Bernese stamp and ten centimes for each of the others.

Between January and December last year the total of passengers carried in coaches run by the Swiss Postal Administration, in all parts of the country, rose to 21,614,988 — 1,350,000 more than in 1951, when the total was 20,264,920.

More than a million telephones were in use in Switzerland last year, or roughly one telephone for every fourth inhabitant. The number of calls made during the year reached 737M (704M in 1951). Of these, 57 per cent were local calls, 41.7 per cent calls to other parts of the country, and 1.3 per cent international calls.

Almost the whole of Switzerland's extensive telephone network is now automatic. Places converted to the completely automatic system last year were Wil, Schwyz and St. Moritz (which, with its average of 98 phones for every 100 inhabitants, holds the world record for telephonic density).

The Swiss Foundation for Alpine Exploration at Zürich has announced that in conjunction with the North American Arctic Institute it will send four Swiss scientists to Baffin Land to continue the researches started by the American-Swiss expedition in 1950. The leader of the expedition is Colonel Baird, of the Arctic Institute, and the members will be British, American, and Canadian scientists accompanied by four Swiss: M. Hans Roetlisberger, Dr. Fritz Schwarzenbach, M. Jürg Marmet, and M. Jean Weber, an engineer.

Another expedition to the Himalayas is also being sponsored by the Zürich Foundation. It will consist Arsenal beat the Grasshopper Club of Zurich 2-1 in Zurich. Half-time score was 1-1. Holton scored Arsenal's goals.

The Swiss air guard which was created last year and whose staff — doctors, nurses, and first aid volunteers — were trained as parachutists by the R.A.F. at Abingdon last summer, had their first full-dress rehearsal in the high Alps. Three members of the air guard were dropped by two aircraft on Kanderfirn at about 300 yards from the Mutthorn hut at 9,710ft.

The parachuting was completed without any difficulty and it was ascertained that at that height parachuting speed was similar to that at low levels. The purpose of the air guard is to help in rescuing injured or marooned climbers. Parachuting has to be from aeroplanes because helicopters, which would be most useful, cannot climb safely to such altitudes.

The preliminary programme of the Lucerne Music Festival which is one of the highlights of the musical year in Europe, has now been published. It shows that the festival, which is taking place from August 8 to 30, will include eight symphony concerts. The list of conductors includes world-famous names like Wilhelm Furtwängler, Victor de Sabata, Igor Markevitch, Herbert von Karajan, Rafael Kubelik and Guido Cantelli. The soloists will be Géza Anda (piano), Nathan Milstein (violin), Wilhelm Backhaus (piano) and Edwin Fischer (piano). Lucerne's own Festival Orchestra will play in the first six concerts, while the orchestra of La Scala (Milan) has been engaged for the seventh and eighth concerts.

This year's Festival programme is of exceptional interest. There will also be chamber music concerts and serenades, and special courses for players of different instruments will be given at the Lucerne Conservatoire. In addition, the organisers are planning five performances of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro".

According to a report submitted to the Swiss Government, net receipts from the gaming rooms of 16 casinos open in Switzerland last year totalled 2,800,00 Swiss francs. That is 400,000 francs more than in 1951.

Until September 30th the Palace of Nations in Geneva, the European offices of the United Nations, will be open to the public. Visiting hours will be 9.30 a.m. to 11.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. to 5.30 p.m. On Saturdays, Sundays and public holidays the doors will be closed at 4.30 p.m. Admission is 75 centimes (1s.3d), or 30 centimes (6d) for children and members of the forces. Visitors can buy UN publications and stamps, and a variety of free booklets and posters dealing with the world-wide activities of UN are also available. There are also official guides to carry out conducted tours. Non-Governmental organisations, schools, universities and similar bodies can organise group visits, and for their benefit talks can be arranged by UN officials, as well as special film shows.
