Among the many interesting but little-known facts which came to light as a result of the recent printing dispute is that there exists in Switzerland an Order of Nuns whose main work is printing.

These nuns, who call themselves "Les Petites Soeurs de Saint-Paul", printed the "Economist", one of the most influential British weeklies, during the dispute.

At Fribourg, the lovely old French-speaking Swiss town which is only 15 minutes by rail from Berne, the federal capital, the Little Sisters of St. Paul have first-class equipment which is completely up-to-date. The nuns themselves are extremely efficient and versatile, we learn from a member of the "Economist" staff who used to live in Chiswick.

The Order was founded in 1873 to "print to the glory of God". Their only convent in this country is at Chelsea. The main work of the Order is to produce "La Liberté", the Roman Catholic newspaper for the canton of Fribourg. They also print books and pamphlets.

Editorial staff of the "Economist" acted as couriers and took the copy over to Switzerland by hand.

Swiss watch retailers are to give President Eisenhower a novel gadget for counting strokes at golf — one of the President's favourite sports.

The machine, encased in gold, is in the form of a wrist watch and does away with the bother of marking a golf card. A button is pressed after each stroke is played, and two dials record the number of strokes from one to 99.

The Swiss Parliament has rejected a claim for 200,000 francs (about £16,000) damages brought against five presidents of the Confederation by a gaoled Swiss Nazi.

Franz Burri, who lived in Austria during the war under the protection of the Nazi authorities, claimed that the Austro-Swiss extradition treaty does not apply to political criminals.

The five presidents replied that there were no diplomatic relations between Switzerland and Austria immediately after the war.

The United States occupation authorities brought Burri to the Austro-Swiss frontier at St. Margarethen in May, 1946, and he was arrested by the Swiss police.

Two years later, he was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment for treason and he is still in prison.

Skiing Feat in the Jungfrau Region.

Two skiers from Neuchâtel have recently achieved a remarkable skiing feat, by negotiating a difference of altitude totalling about 33,300ft. in one single day. They made the same periple four times, following the itinerary: by train from Grindelwald to Kleine Scheidegg, thence by skilift to the Lauberhorn, from which they descended on to Wengen. From there, they took the aerial cableway to the Maennlichen, whence they skied all the way down to Grindelwald, thus completing what may be the longest "downhill only" skiing run ever carried out in one day, and an achievement which many skiers regarded until now as impossible.

The famous spa and health resort of Scuol-Tarasp-Vulpera, nestling between the majestic summits of the lower Engadine and the gently ascending spur of the Silvretta Massive, recently added a gondola-type aerial cableway to its many attractions. Starting near the Rhaetian Railway station, it makes accessible the sunny slopes of the splendid Motta Naluns towering 6665ft. above sea level. Its total length is

The trip lasts a quarter of an hour. Scuol-Tarasp-Vulpera, due to its ideal climate, breath-taking scenery and natural carbonate springs is especially well-known as a summer resort. It has now turned into a bustling winter sports centre, which offers a Swiss Ski School, skating and curling rinks, a variety of paths for winter hikers as well as plenty of snow and sunshine.

50 Years of Winter Service on the Vitznau-Rigi Cogwheel Railway.

In the year 1906 the cogwheel railway Vitznau-Rigi for the first time made its way up the steep mountainside in winter. Today, 50 years later, the Rigi ranges amongst the most popular skiing centres in Switzerland. Since that modest beginning half a century ago great progress has been achieved: In January, 1907, the cogwheel trains conveyed 757 tourists, and in the same month of 1955 the number of passengers reached the astounding total of 11,000. The Rigi boasts many rewarding ski descents, its own Ski School, as well as a toboggan run, a superbly located curling and ice rink, and an extensive network of well-tended paths. At Rigi-Kaltbad, Staffelhoehe, Staffel and Kulm an array of famous and excellently managed hotels has sprung up, and Rigi-Kaltbad, with over 50 chalets on sunny and fog-free sites, has grown to be a booming resort.

The Lucerne International Festival of Music (15th August — 6th September, 1956).

The long list of events which have made Lucerne a tourist mecca as well as a cultural centre, every year culminates in the International Festival of Music, held in the month of August. Classical and modern masterpieces performed by first-class orchestras, famous conductors and soloists of world-wide reputation are featured in this coming summer's musical programme. Highlights of the Festival are five concerts by the Swiss Festival Orchestra (August 15th to 29th) and three concerts by the Philharmonic Orchestra of England. The traditional serenades in front of the Lion Memorial, chamber music sessions, choral concerts and a series of drama performances at the Municipal Theatre will supplement the calendar of events.

The Zurich June Festival 1956.

The annual Zurich June Festival is an impressive testimonial of the cultural vigilance of Switzerland's metropolis. An abundant programme of shows and concerts has again been scheduled for this coming summer. Five well-known theatrical troupes from England, Italy, France and Switzerland will present their best productions in their own languages: June 9th, "El Nost Milan" (Il Piccolo Teatro della Città di Milano); June 11th/12th, "Don Juan" (Le Théâtre Populaire National de Paris); June 20th-22nd, "The Rivals" (The Bristol Old Vic Company); July 1st/2nd, "Amphitryon" (La Compagnie Madeleine Renaud-Jean-Louis Barrault, Paris); and "King Henry V" (Troupe of the Zurich Playhouse). Among the conductors who will direct the five symphony concerts of the June Festival are Bruno Walter, Otto Klemperer and Hans Rosbaud. The participation of numerous world-renowned soloists has been secured. In addition to the musical and theatrical highlights, an exhibition of paintings by unknown masters of the 15th to the 19th centuries has been scheduled at the Zurich Museum of Fine Arts.

Switzerland's Stability of Prices.

Switzerland has in recent years become even more of a bargain for tourists, after being described as expensive compared to other nations right after the war. The reason for this is that in numerous European countries, whose economy had suffered during the war, the boom of the post-war years was accompanied by a tremendous boost in the cost of living. Therefore, many tourist countries, which on account of their low prices, proved particularly attractive for tourists in the transitional period of past years, are by no means better bargains than Switzerland nowadays. A look at the cost of living index (1948 = 100) of some Western European countries in 1955 reveals interesting hints as to this boost: Switzerland's cost of living level rose to only 106, Western Germany's to 110, Italy's to 124, Great Britain's to 137, France's to 144, Austria's to 207. Judging from these figures, it can be concluded that Switzerland, in comparison to other nations, has maintained a much better stability of prices during the past seven years, which consequently makes her one of the most advantageous tourist and holiday countries.

Famous all the World over for Quality and Tradition

The Engadine Concert Weeks will make the resort villages in Switzerland's picturesque Engadine Valley echo with exquisite music from July 17th to August 15th. Sixteen concerts by the Vienna Konzerthaus Quartet, the 22 musicians of Bold Neel's English Chamber Orchestra, the 100 singers of the fabled Dom Choir of Strasbourg and other musical performers have been scheduled.

News from the Seiler Hotels Concern, Zermatt.

The Seiler Hotels concern in Zermatt, with approximately 700 beds, has been in existence for just over a hundred years. A programme of renovation has recently been initiated. Improvements to the various hotels are being carried out, and a new building, planned in collaboration with the PTT, will be of the greatest importance to the resort. Apart from a spacious Post Office, which will cover the needs of the constantly expanding resort, and several large shops, this ensemble of buildings will be erected on the site now occupied by the Seiler Tea Shop, at the very heart of the resort. A new tea shop, equipped for up-to-date catering, as well as first-class hotel-rooms with balconies and facing south, worthy of the most exacting clientele, will be incorporated. The work should begin shortly, and it is hoped that the premises, which will be called "New Seiler House", will be ready by Whitsun 1957. To complete the project, the Villa Margherita, a dependency of the Hotel Mont-Cervin and situated opposite, will undergo a complete transformation both inside and outside. Special attention will be given to the installation of private bathrooms and showers.

700 Anniversary of the City of Sursee.

Sursee, the quaint little town in the Canton of Lucerne, commemorates its 700th anniversary this year. A document dated 1256 and treasured in the cantonal archives of the city of Lucerne, reveals that Count Hartmann the Younger of Kyburg donated a homestead to the district and convent of St. Urban, "so that they may build a house in that very place", and on the same occasion admitted the monastery of St. Urban under his protectorate. Authentic relics at Sursee today are evidential of an urban community established under the sovereignty of the Kyburgs which lasted till 1278. The commemorative day, July 8th, will be marked by several popular festivities as well as a historic pageant. An exhibition of paintings, armour and other vestiges of Sursee's colourful history will be an added attraction.

HYMNE A LA TERRE.

Pierre Girard.

Soil of my homeland, ever sunlight-fed
And tilled throughout the year, a fruitful loam;
Soil of the vineyard, soil that grows our bread,
That throbs with life, surrounding every home.

All Heaven's breath and energy contrive
By unseen rays to stir the hidden root
And, mingling in your breast, create a life
That slowly rises in each tender shoot.

Soil, you that reabsorb our flesh, our hopes,
Our tears, desires, our triumphs and defeats
So that from lake and plain to mountain slopes
The morning harvest that of evening greets.

It is your strength, O soil, that gives us birth,
Your destiny dwells mirrored in our heart;
Your laws are ours, for everywhere on earth
Death, love and flowering have their part.

We love you in our women's eyes that shine,
And in the golden skin of those who toil,
We love your gift of glowing, dreamy wine
Soil of our fathers and our children's soil.

To you, the dead who rest and softly sleep
Beside the church whose shadow oft is thrown,
Now blue, now grey, as the hours onward creep,
We promise we shall make your task our own.

This land you gave us, land so rich and fair,
With vineyards rising steeply from the shore,
It shall be handed to our children's care
To guard its noble past for evermore.
