Federal-Councillor Dr. Markus Feldmann, head of the Department of Justice and Police, spoke in the National Council about the Dubois-Ulrich affair. (Mr. René Dubois, Swiss Attorney-General, committed suicide last March, and Police Inspector Max Ulrich was arrested.) They were alleged to have been involved in the tapping of Egyptian Embassy telephone lines and passing the information obtained to the French Embassy in Berne.

In his statement Dr. Feldmann said the International position of Switzerland had not suffered in the past six months and her neutral status "is untouched everywhere in the world today". He said that telephone lines to foreign embassies and legations in Switzerland are tapped and some "interesting discoveries" have been made for the protection of the country.

Of Dubois, Mr. Feldmann said: "the main proof of his culpability may be seen in his suicide". He had considerably over-stepped the legal limits on the exchange of information and gravely violated his official obligations in handing over confidential documents to people outside his office.

The Federal Council has appointed Mr. Charles Monnet to the post of Honorary Swiss Consul in Lille.

Consul Monnet was born in 1893 at Lausanne, and is a citizen of Vevey, he has been for many years the representative of the Lille branch of CIBA, A.G. Basle.

Mr. Gubler entered the service of the Federal Political department (Swiss Foreign Office) in 1941, and formerly occupied posts at Brussels, Antwerp and Bucharest.

The Ethiopian Minister, Monsieur Blatein-Gueta Ephrem Tewelde-Mehden, has presented his credentials to Dr. H. Streuli, President of the Swiss Confederation, and Dr. Max Petitpierre, Swiss Foreign Minister, at the Palais Fédéral in Berne.

DEATHS.

The following deaths are reported from Switzerland:

Pierre Grellet, journalist, as the result of a fall in the Valaisan alps, at the age of 75. The deceased was regarded as perhaps the outstanding Swiss journalist of his generation. He was born at Colombier (Ct. Neuchâtel). In his early youth he had the great advantage of being a pupil of Philippe Godet, and his later studies took him to Berne, Leipzig, Berlin, Paris and London. His first editorial post (1908-09) was with "Suisse Libérale" of Neuchâtel, and after a short spell with the Swiss telegraphic agency he was appointed parliamentary correspondent in Berne of the "Gazette de Lausanne" in 1911. His advent introduced a new touch and tone in Swiss reporting. His writing had sparkle, he refused to be hide-bound in his thinking, and he never took staid parliamentarians as seriously as they themselves sometimes did. His long service in Berne marked what is perhaps the gayest chapter in the story of Swiss daily journalism.

Grellet was the author of many historical works, and amongst other honours he was awarded the prize

ANNIVERSARIES.

M. Charles Edouard Jeanneret (internationally known as Le Corbusier) (70), of La Chaux-de-Fonds. His revolutionary conception of architecture has made him one of the most controversial personalities of the century. He was closely associated with Gropius, Mies van der Rohe, and other members of the "Bauhaus" of Weimar. Many of his plans remain on the drawing board. For many years M. Jeanneret has made his home in Paris, and at present he is completing in his studio in the Rue de Sèvres the details for an exhibition of his works and writings to be held later at La Chaux-de-Fonds, which town has commemorated the anniversary by conferring on him the freedom of the city.

Max Werner Lenz (70), of Herisau, well-known author, producer and actor. He was for many years closely connected with the cabarets "Cornichon" and "Fédéral". Amongst his best-known books is the novel "Fahrerin Scherrer". [A.T.S.]

VARIOUS.

The general receding movement of alpine glaciers was slowed down by the summer of 1956, which was the coldest in the Swiss Alps since 1841. As a result glaciers and snowfields increased both in depth and surface — for instance, the Jungfraufirn rose by 5ft.

The bad summers of 1813 to 1816 were followed by a general progression of alpine glaciers, reaching a peak in 1818. Some glaciologists therefore think there may be a new and general progression of alpine glaciers in the coming years.

This information is given in the report for 1955-56 of the Swiss federal commission for the observation of glaciers. The commission reports the finding of some valuable documents describing the movements of the Paradies glacier, at the source of the Rhine. It had been observed by F. F. Coaz before he made the first ascent of Piz Bernina (13,345ft.) in 1850: regular observations started in 1868, and were continued by the federal commission on glaciers when it was created in 1893.

In 88 years the Paradies glacier receded by 1,400 yards, which is a yearly average of about 16 yards. It receded by 261 yards between 1868 and 1901; by 227 yards in 1901-20; by 486 yards in 1920-45; and 426 yards in 1945-56. During the last period the yearly average, of 38.75 yards, was the highest.

Out of 69 glaciers examined during the 1955-56 glaciological year, 56 were receding (50 the previous year), three were at a standstill (seven the previous year) and nine were moving forward (19 the previous year). Among those which were receding were the Turtmann glacier, by 304ft; Aletsch, 144ft.; Gorner, 65ft.; Arolla, 111ft.; Trient, 177ft.; Oberer Grindel-

Novel trends in Swiss hotel construction. The new trends in modern architecture have also had an influence on hotel construction in Switzerland. Several recently completed buildings have been constructed in the modern fashion as regards style and appointments, and some of them fit into their scenic setting most impressively. At Ascona, in sunny Ticino, the Hotel "Europe au Lac", designed by the well-known Swiss architect Erhard Gull, has recently been opened. Owing to the limited building space available the hotel was built on a triangular ground plan, and thus two of its sides overlook Lake Maggiore. All rooms have balconies. At the main entrance there is a pleasant "locanda" (local inn). An originally shaped bay admits the lake right to the restaurant terrace. The dining-rooms, bars and lounges, decorated in pastel shades, have an unmistakably Southern aspect, and the triangular, arcaded inner courtyard offers a wonderful vista on the lake. Not only new buildings, however, but also some old ones that have been re-designed are being widely talked about in Switzerland. For example, the re-designed "Vieux Manoir" Hotel, on the Lake of Murten/Morat, very near the place where the Confederates of old defeated Charles the Bold in 1476. Set amid a charming landscape of vineyards, a former patrician house has been made into a modern hotel for holiday-makers without sacrificing its old-world atmosphere. Each room has an individual style; ancient four-poster beds and other antique furniture are among the appointments. For business meetings, knightly halls serve as conference rooms. A smart grill-room, a period restaurant and a bar are added attractions. Special rooms where fish dishes and wine are served have been installed in an old farmhouse. Furthermore, there is also an open-air grill in the middle of the great park. The hotel grounds extend to the banks of the lake, where, on a wide frontage, there are private harbour and bathing beach. It is indeed gratifying to note how much trouble is taken by Swiss architects when making alterations of this kind; they give due importance to the modern in the most practical way, yet preserve the ancient where this is deemed to be worth while.
