A total of 3,200 hotels and guest-houses (pensions) with 76,000 beds will be available this winter in Switzerland's 150 mountain resorts scattered all over the Alps, the Pre-Alps and the Jura mountains. These figures show that the typical Swiss winter sports hotel is by no means a "palace" but a small enterprise with an average of less than 25 beds. Winter holidays in Switzerland — which is known for the stability of its prices — are no luxury, and very favourable all-in rates are within the reach of everybody.

A new skilift, Schuls-Tarasp (extension to the cable-car Motta Naluns) will be inaugurated before Christmas 1958. The terminal will be near the Schlivera Hut, at 7,800 feet above sea-level, where skiing is possible from December till April.

The well-known Swiss mountain guide and skiing instructor, Mr. Hch. Full details may be obtained from the Swiss National Tourist Office, 459 Strand, London W.C.2.

Alongside Switzerland's Alpine roads the Automobile Club of Switzerland maintains more than 300 special "SOS" telephone stations, which can be used free of charge for emergency calls. The A.C.S. suggests some "golden rules" for happy and trouble-free motoring in Switzerland. About boiling radiators: "Going over an Alpine pass, keep your car in low gear to avoid overheating of the engine. Should the radiator start boiling, stop the car at a suitable siding but keep the engine running, which means that water pump and radiator fan can continue to do their cooling work. Open the hood of the engine compartment, but not the radiator cap". About motoring in winter: "From September to May, keep snow chains ready in your luggage boot when venturing up higher than 2,500 feet. All winter resorts are situated above this critical altitude, but all major cities are below it. Remember that one car, helplessly stuck on a mountain road without snow chains, can impede traffic for one or two hours."
