The Swiss Government is to ask Parliament to grant a credit of sixty-six million francs for the purchase of one hundred Mark V Centurion British-made tanks from South Africa. The demand will be considered by Parliament during its next session, in September.

The tanks are to be sold with a full supply of ammunition and a complete stock of spare parts. The Centurions are new and have been driven only the 300 miles which represents the yearly routine mileage required to keep them in running order. South Africa, it is said, no longer needs the fifty-ton tanks, owing to the complete transformation of British policy towards Imperial defence.

Visitors enjoying the late summer on the shores of Lake Lucerne will find that between 13th August and 8th September scarcely a day goes by without at least one item of the International Musical Festival taking place in Lucerne. For nearly four weeks, one artistic event follows hard upon another, and once again every taste is catered for in the richly diversified programme. The first four symphony concerts will be given on 13th, 17th, 20th and 27th August, by the Festival Orchestra under the baton of Ferenc Fricsay, Sir John Barbiroli, Karl Böhm, and Lorin Maazel. The same orchestra is to play in the grand choral and orchestral concert to be given on 24th August, with Rafael Kubelik as conductor. Apart from these festival concerts and other recitals the first performance in German of the English play, "The Aspen Papers", by Michael Redgrave (from a story by Henry James), will be given on 21st August in the Municipal Theatre and repeated on 23rd, 25th, 29th and 31st August. The Museum of Fine Arts started early with an exhibition entitled "Italian Painters of To-day", which opened on 2nd August.

THE ROSENLAUI MOUNTAINEERING SCHOOL

By SIR ARNOLD LUNN

It was in 1933 that I first met Arnold Glatthard, the founder of the famous Mountaineering School at Rosenlaui. I had skied across the Grosse Scheidegg and I asked the Hotel at Meiringen to find two young men who could carry the skis of our party up to Mägisalp. In due course Arnold Glatthard turned up with another young man, his brother if I remember rightly. It was soon obvious that the Hotel had chosen wisely for not only did these young men do the job for which they were paid, carrying our skis as well as their own up to the alp, but they entered whole hearted into the fun and excitement of a good day's ski-ing in the hills. "Gladly", as he was called, was not only a convenience but also a companion.

That was in 1933; two years later he won the blue ribbon of Alpine ski-ing, the Arlberg-Kandahar, held that year at Mürren. He had arrived. Meanwhile he had taken out his patent as a mountain guide and also as a ski-teacher, but it was only in 1939, the fateful year when the Second World War began, that Glatthard founded his mountaineering school at Rosenlaui.

He could not have chosen a more beautiful place. Indeed Rosenlaui was one of the first mountain resorts to become famous for its beauty. In the eighteenth century there were two classic mountain expeditions, to visit the glaciers of Grindelwald or the glaciers of Chamonix. Those who chose the first of these tours frequently crossed the Great Scheidegg from Grindelwald to Meiringen via Rosenlaui and thence proceeded over the Jochpass to Engelberg. Archdeacon Coxe reversed the direction and in the course of one of his alpine journeys, crossed the Scheidegg from Meiringen and wrote an attractive account of Rosenlaui. A little later Byron and Wordsworth both crossed the Scheidegg from Grindelwald. And it was not only travellers who came this way but artists. The view of the Wetterhorn and Wellhorn from the meadow on the approach to Rosenlaui from Meiringen was one of the classic views beloved by painters in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Lory, a master of the delicate art of the coloured aquatint, and Calame both chose this view.

It was not, of course, only or mainly for its beauty that Arnold Glatthard chose Rosenlaui for his school. Rosenlaui has long been famous as a mountaineering centre. It was from Rosenlaui that three Meiringen guides climbed the Wetterhorn on September 1st 1844, but it is the limestone range of the Engelhörner which to-day attracts the climbers, for these peaks offer the widest range of climbs from excessively severe to comparatively easy. The exploration of this range began comparatively late and it was not until September 21st 1876 that the Gross-Engelhorn was first climbed by Seymour Hoare with the guides Johann von
