1966

Another year draws to a close. It is the time of goodwill and benevolence. It is also the moment for reflection on the past and speculation as to what the future has in store for us. All is not well with the world. Every right-thinking human being must ask himself what he could do to help bring about peace to the sorely troubled nations. What indeed is there for us other than to pray like the wise Chinese: "O God, make thy world better and begin with me!"
