March 1981

from the Swiss Centre Restaurants, Leicester Square, London

TWO of the West End's leading restaurants – The Chesa and the Locanda – have been given a completely new look as part of the massive £1.5 million refurbishing programme of the Swiss Centre Restaurants in Leicester Square. In both the emphasis is on atmosphere, impeccable service and the kind of delicious food only the Swiss can prepare.

In the luxury Chesa meals are served on elegant, specially-designed china and silverware, with discreet service to match. In the more cost-conscious Locanda there is a new warm and cozy ambiance typical of the Italian region of Switzerland, with the biggest and most colourful lampshades imaginable hanging from the ceiling. A feature here is the buffet where you can see the chef preparing his Zabaione and other delicious desserts.

As for the menus . . . we give you a tantalising taste of these on the following pages.
