Swiss goods vehicles

Regarding the article by John Jesson in Vol.4/5 of Swiss Express regarding Early 2-axle Vans. I have not seen much on models of goods wagons in N gauge, and therefore mention a range of models called 'Swiss Toys'. This includes not only Gkln but also other types characteristic of the SBB, such as Ucs silo wagons. I understand that they are produced in small quantities. Between 1975 and 1990 I obtained some nice models at a shop (name unfortunately forgotten) along the main street in Interlaken, not far from Ost station.

Rhätische Bahn

I have recently returned from a few very pleasant days in Switzerland. (When could a few days in Switzerland not be pleasant?) Below, are a few things I learned while I was there. You may be aware of these facts already, maybe not. I found an RhB man at Filisur who can speak English, and he told me that the new Ge 4/4 are now working virtually all passenger trains on the Chur - St. Moritz - Chur route and usually one working the Landquart - Davos route. All freight traffic is handled by Ge 4/4 or Ge 6/6. The old Krokodils are still available for special trains, and one is also put into service once a month "to keep the wheels turning."

I don't know the feelings of the drivers of the new locomotives, but my own opinion is that the Ge 4/4 look better and more interesting than the newer locomotives. Also, I had the impression that the new locomotives do not accelerate as fast as their older counterparts. Gone is the familiar old whistle too. The new version sounds like a cross between a car horn and an American locomotive.

My journey homeward bound from Landquart to Zürich yielded a surprise. I travelled on the 12.34 from Landquart. The train engine was SBB Re 4/4, number 11372, but leading it was BLS Re 4/4, number 465003. I have never seen BLS locos in this part of the country before. The date was 17 March.

At the beginning of my few days in Switzerland, inspired by the article in the latest edition of Swiss Express, I spent a night in Kriens and observed the action on the KLB. It was certainly interesting.

This is an extract from a letter from Anthony McDiarmid, of the Japanese Railway Society, the JRS has now set up an import service to supply models to its members, as Japanese models are hard to come by in Britain otherwise. A spin off of this service is that many of the products available to us are also suited to layouts of European and American persuasion. We are able to obtain much of the Kato, Tomix and Green Max ranges. Items such as the NEW Kato Eurostar are of particular interest to many modellers. JRS model supplies can supply products to your members at the same reduced club prices as benefits our own club members. The only requirement is that all orders are accompanied by the purchasers club and membership number.

The reason for us making this offer to members is, in addition to trying to aid fellow modellers, we have a set minimum order level from our overseas supplier in order to gain the substantial discounts offered, and on condition that we do NOT sell direct to the public through a retail outlet or by mail order. As the JRS is only a small society of currently 150 or so members, extra sales to other societies members will guarantee continued supplies. For further information:- Japanese Railway Society, Mr. B. Hunter, 793a Finchley Road, Golders Green, London, NW11 8DP.
